MISSOULA--

Dr. Dexter M. Roberts, an associate professor of English at the University of Montana, will discuss "Journals of the Invaders" as keynote speaker Monday, Nov. 24, in the free public lecture series sponsored by the UM Environmental Studies Program. The series, presented under the theme, "A Sense of Place," deals with the relationship between the humanities and the environment.

Monday's program will be at 7:30 p.m. in room 131 of the UM Science Complex.

Besides being open to the public without charge, the lecture series is being offered for academic credit through the UM Center for Continuing Education and Summer Programs.

Roberts received his bachelor's degree at Colgate University and doctor of philosophy degree in English at Stanford University. He joined the UM faculty in 1962.
